

Waiting for the next shoe to drop on plans for restricting parking on the streets of La Crosse? You might have a long wait. Neighborhood Revitalization Commission chair, Sara Sullivan says the committee that developed the recent controversial parking proposals is basically shelving that process for now

\(Click for Audio\)

Public hearings held last month provided plenty of comments about the need for street parking changes. But only in very specific places. Like the residential area that borders UWL.