

The La Crosse city council's unanimous decision last night to reduce the council size to 13 members, was a positive move in one political pundit's eyes. But will representation suffer in the end? UW-L Political professor, Joe Heim.

\(Click for Audio\)

Heim also feels the downsized council will now become more efficient. The council also approved converting the Committee of the Whole to a monthly planning meeting.