

Voters in Wisconsin's 94th assembly district have Mike Huebsch to blame for a special election today. It was clear that the former speaker of the assembly was destined for a spot in the Scott Walker administration as soon as he was re-elected to the assembly seat he'd held for nearly 20 years and Walker was elected to governor last November. Now, Huebsch is Walker's Secretary of Administration and republican John Lautz and democrat Steve Doyle are vying for shot to replace him in the assembly. One of three special elections being held in the state today.
