

She wants to know what is going on in Madison. State Senate Democrat Kathleen Vinehout is speaking out against public hearings held by different sections of the state legislature....that in her eyes....continually avoid Western Wisconsin.

First budgets hearings then gun control hearings.

Vinehout says it's gotten so out of hand that bills being voted on now by some state legislators, are not even being read before they vote. So not only do they not have a clue...but the public is being left in the dark as well. She also says those that are facing recall elections are trying to ram bills through before they are voted out of office.
