

Regardless of how the deficit talks in Washington turn out, are we seeing signs of a Republican party splinter?

Tea Party republicans have been occasionally vocal in their criticisms of the mainstream GOP in handling the debt ceiling crisis. But La Crosse county republican party chair Bill Feehan thinks those are minor differences. In the end, he says, all republicans can agree that the government is spending too much money and taking too much in taxes.

And, Feehan says, it's always the democrats who are proponents of lots of spending and taxes; also something all republicans should agree on.
