

La Crosse courts have handled a couple of priest abuse cases in the last two years...

Now, another one has turned up, with a priest who was in La Crosse for a church law conference accused of touching a teenage girl's breast in public. The Rev. David Szatkowski reportedly was drunk at the time, and one of the victim's friends took a picture of him with a cell phone. Police report the incident happened outside the Radisson on Monday night. Szatkowski tells police he had been drinking wine, brandy, and whiskey during and after dinner that night, but did not feel 'buzzed.'
