

Onalaska police and the local Dairy Queen partner up on a contest for kids. On the departments facebook page Onalaska middle school and high school kids can answer brain teaser questions and might win an ice cream treat from Dairy Queen. Administrative assistant Pam Sharp says Police chief Jeff Trotnic is all about connecting with kids. He feels this contest is a way to increase trust between youngsters and the department and makes it a fun way to increase interaction. Winners will be drawn every month thru the end of May.
