

A decision to snub a federal law could come back to bite Wisconsin. The Walker administration has ended work on a state health insurance exchange as mandated by a federal health care overhaul. From the Wisconsin Association of Health Plans, Pete Dougherty worries that the move could mean the feds eventually take over establishing the health exchange if the Supreme Court upholds the law

If the Supreme Court rules in favor of the controversial law, the state will have just a few months to establish an exchange.