

A decision reached today on when a La Crosse city council meeting will be held to overturn Mayor Matt Harter's latest vetoes. On Tuesday the council will go for the override on Harter's vetoes of three advisory referendum questions, a move which would keep them from the spring ballot. The council has to overturn by Tuesday in order to get those questions on the ballot. The referendum questions involve billboards and city council size. Among other reasons, Harter says he vetoed the referendum questions because voters have enough to consider with a binding referendum on a city administrator already at the polls.