

Big changes could be coming to municipal court in the region. The city of La Crosse is poised to study combining its municipal court with Onalaska's. An idea that's actually come up in the past several months. Onalaska judge John Brinckman says, when he was first approached about the idea, he was less than impressed with the concept

Among the changes that would likely come with a combined court is going from two judges to one, and moving all cases to a single courtroom in one of the cities.