

Cops Say Potential Suspect Leaves Wallet at Home Entry

Monday, 06 February 2012 18:11 -

Police figure they've got a pretty good lead on a home break-in this week-end in La Crosse. Cops say someone climbed through a window at a house next to Weigent Park on the near southside sometime over the week-end. They do have some footprints in the snow under the window. They've swabbed a bit for DNA inside. But, probably more compelling is a wallet they found under the window with a driver's license inside. They've listed the owner of the wallet as the most likely suspect for the break-in.