

Mayor Pay Cut Raises Ire of One Councilman

The line has blurred a bit between two potentially contentious issues in La Crosse. At least it has for some on the city council. The council is moving towards a resolution that would cut the next mayor's salary in half if voters approve hiring a city administrator in the April election. But councilman John Satory says the pay cut is really just an endorsement of the administrator idea. And he doesn't like it

The pay cut would put the mayor's salary at about 38 thousand a year.
