

Minnesota republican lawmakers and governor Dayton haven't exactly been chummy in the last year or so. But Preston state rep Greg Davids says relationships may thaw a little. The republican chair of the house tax committee in Saint Paul says he's pleasantly surprised with much of what he heard from the governor in last week's state of the state address. Davids says, even the democrat's tone was more positive

Davids says he jotted down several positive notes about issues he'd be willing to work with the governor on. Like one of Dayton's top priorities, a new Vikings stadium.
