The flu was a little late in getting to Wisconsin this winter...

Luckily, it sounds like people in La Crosse County were ready for it well in advance. County public health nurse Christine Berth doesn't expect too many people to ask for flu shots in March, because so many shots were given during the fall. In fact, Berth says this is the time of year when the county starts ordering flu vaccine for next season. The Centers for Disease Control says this is the latest beginning for a flu season since the early 80's.
