

The Investigation Into A Death List Continues

The investigation into a Sparta student's arrest last week for compiling a Death list with 26 students names on it, is far from over. That from school Superintendent, John Hendricks. In the meantime, he says since these situations are scarce in the district, there were some things the district will take from it.

Hendricks says the district is working with Sparta Police and the state to understand why a 16 year old sophomore compiled the list of male and female students that he wanted to kill. The male student is now undergoing a psychological examine out of the area.
