responders worked on her in the apartment, got her to the hospital, where she later died of her wounds. Police say the wounds do not appear to be self-inflicted and they continue to investigate the shooting with the help of several other agencies. No one in custody at this point. Police are also investigating a separate shooting on the northside that happened within minutes of the Hougom killing. In that shooting, someone pumped at least four bullets into a home on Island street, although no one was injured.
