

Some progress in efforts to reopen the idled Bangor Post Office...

The village president got the key to the building last week, and has taken a couple of contractors inside to figure out what needs to be repaired. Village attorney Dan Arndt tells us that the building owner has signed a contract, agreeing to fix the building and get it open as a post office again. The Bangor Post Office was shut down suddenly three months ago, because of leaks and mold problems. Mail services have been transferred temporarily to a supermarket a few blocks away.
