

Are Wisconsin voters fed up with recalls?

Now that state residents have decided to keep Governor Scott Walker in office, Walker and others believe the public wants recalls to become less common. Bill Feehan, Republican candidate for State Senate in La Crosse, says the existing recall law is too outdated for a state with over five million people.

Walker had predicted that if he lost, Democrats would be prepared to push for even more recall elections to gain power.