

New garbage regulations have been in place in La Crosse for a just a couple of months, and they could already be getting some modifications. One of the key parts of the new garbage rules involved lids, tightly fitted on containers. But some early complaints and even thefts of lids have prompted city hall to consider lifting that requirement for putting garbage out. If modifications are approved, trash would still have to go to the curb in containers, just not in ones with lids. The public works department tells us the rules could be further altered to address container size limitations in the future.
