

Maybe some misunderstanding. That's what La Crosse city councilman Paul Medinger thinks is behind the anger among some about changes to the council structure made last month that, among other things, severely limits public testimony in front of the whole council.

Still, Medinger now thinks the changes may have been a mistake. He's introduced a measure to reconsider. The council votes on that tonight.