

La Crosse could see a big development go up in the middle of the city. But the project needs some re-zoning approval from the city council, which considers the issue tonight. At stake is a multi-floor project with dozens of apartments and commercial spaces on the ground floor. So far there's been vocal resistance over a lack of parking. City council member Andrea Richmond hopes the issue gets worked out

\(Click for Audio\)

The biggest resistance has been from neighboring landlords. Richmond thinks that may be a competition issue.