

A La Crosse guy whose dogs were destroyed by the city in November is having canine troubles again. Cops say Steven Reinsvold's two dogs were on the loose on the southside this past week-end. The dogs eventually wound up back home. Reinsvold admitted his dogs were running around but only for a little awhile. The cop who wrote Reinsvold a ticket says he was belligerent and aggressive and clearly not capable of controlling his dogs. Reinsvold had two pit bulls who were seized and euthanized by the city in November after the duo terrorized the neighborhood and killed a neighbor's dog.