

Maybe snow days won't have to be an all day kind of thing.

The La Crosse school district is considering allowing late starts to school days instead of calling the whole day off because of wintry weather. A new survey of parents in the district spurred looking at the change.

La Crosse superintendent Jerry Kember says if the district moves to late starts to deal with weather, that could keep the school year from dragging on into summer because of missed days during winter.