

A LaCrosse man busted for dealing crack cocaine has his case moved into federal court. Tremayne Palmer was arrested in March after cops caught him dealing and possessing drugs. Apparently, he's considered a big enough threat to have his case moved from county court to the federal court in Madison where the sentences tend to be longer. The 32 year old faces between 10 years to life in a federal lockup if he's convicted on all charges.