A brand new Onalaska bride may have to pay the price for some wedding night hi-jinx. Cops say the 58 year-old woman was married over the week-end and held her reception at a northside motel's restaurant. But the restaurant manager says, sometime near the end of the night, the bride grabbed a display of dozens of cheap rings from the hostess stand and put them with her stuff to take home. She's on video swiping the rings and cops say they found the jewelry at her home but she still denied it right up until she was arrested for the theft.
