

Company wellness programs would provide a tax credit to small businesses for 30 percent of the costs of a workplace wellness program, support Wisconsin employers efforts to reduce their health care costs and those of their employees. Local lawmaker, Steve Doyle says he's all for Senate Bill 73.

\(Click for Audio\)

A workplace wellness program is a health or fitness program, as certified by the Department of Health Services, that is provided with health risk assessments. Senator Jennifer Shilling is a co-sponsor of the bill, introduced last month.