

Questionable mailings in the City of La Crosse.

The City of La

Crosse Utilities Office has been receiving numerous calls from customers with questions about postcards and letters they've received from a company called HOMESERVE. Information from this company is apparently intended to promote a program the company provides to cover emergency repairs to the portion of the water service owned by the property owner.

The city says that this company is in no way associated with the City of La Crosse or the Utilities Office. Property owners are being asked to contact and consult with their local homeowner insurance agents for advice related to this type of coverage.
