

Educator representatives from around the nation were in Georgia last week for the National Education Association's Annual Meeting and Representative Assembly. School violence was a hot topic amongst educators but Betsy Kippers with the Wisconsin Education Association says the conversation goes well beyond violence in schools.

\(Click for Audio\)

She said having discussions and networking with 9 thousand other educators about what works, policy wise and real world experience that can be duplicated, is a step in the right direction.