

False Alarm Leads to Disorderly Conduct Charge

Tuesday, 10 August 2010 08:29 -

Some people get drunk and get into fights. Some get all liquored up and fall down, or just fall asleep. But a woman in La Crosse went a different route for her Sunday evening drunken fun, they say. Fifty year-old woman on the northside called 911 to report a house on fire with a three year-old child trapped inside. Fire department and cops apparently wasted no time getting there. Just to find out the call was a hoax. Stinking drunk, cops describe the woman; blew a .31. They also gave her a disorderly conduct ticket for the false alarm.