

Plenty of job openings in Wisconsin. Eventually. The state's labor department says a million jobs will open up in the state by 2020. The vast majority, the state says, coming from the exiting of the labor force by retiring baby boomers. But are boomers really in the retiring mood? Lisa Lamkins, with Wisconsin AARP, questions that

\(Click for Audio\)

Lamkins says many boomers won't retire completely, but will likely stick to some part time work well into the traditional retirement years.