

Councilman Complaints Lead to Pot House Bust

Sometimes it takes a little shove from the city council to get things done. La Crosse police say they've had several complaints from a city council member for some time about lots of stop and go traffic at a house on Denton street. Lots of people in the neighborhood also concerned and suspicious about the heavy traffic at the house. And for good reason, apparently. When police got inside, they found a small scale marijuana selling operation. They've arrested 19 year-old Rhodey Dezelske for dealing. He told police he's got about two customers a day and sells only about an ounce and quarter a month.
