

A meeting of the minds over a washed out La Crosse road is closer to happening now. A city council committee has approved a special group to have a sit down with surrounding towns over fixing Bliss Road that runs up to Grandad Bluff. City council member Bob Seaquist would be on the committee. He would like to repair Bliss completely. Very tricky and expensive, he agrees. And that expense is why the city wants to get together with town governments; city council members are hoping to share the costs of the repairs.
