

Governor Scott Walker was busy in his first day in office Monday. He called a special session of the Legislature to focus on passing a series of measures he's proposing designed to spur economic growth.

But..... Democrat Jennifer Shilling....can both sides work together to create more jobs for the state? She tells WIZM news that yes both sides can sit down and discuss jobs, the economy....anything. But...agreeing...now that may be totally different. She says the Democrats have already sent a letter to Governor Walker with their ideas and proposals for job growth, but they have not heard back from their boss yet.

Besides the special session.....Walker also gave the attorney general the OK to sue the federal government over the health insurance reform law.