A hearing on ethics today in La Crosse city hall. The ethics board hearing testimony in complaint against mayor Matt Harter. At the heart of the complaint are the mayor's actions during meetings with county solid waste director, Hank Koch. Although the meetings happened in February, it wasn't until months later that Koch claimed the mayor had wept in his office and begged for a solid waste study not to go forward. Koch claimed that the mayor left a five inch puddle of tears and mucus on Koch's conference table. But the mayor, through his attorney, says Koch's version of events isn't credible and the mayor did nothing wrong.
